SECTION A - WORKBOOK

Unit I: Receptive Skills: Reading Skills and Listening Skills

1. Read the following passage and answer the questions given below: 5×1= 5

The Internet has changed our world. It has been defined as 'a world-wide broadcasting capability, a mechanism for information dissemination, and a medium for collaboration and interaction between individuals and their computers without regard for geographic location'. Instant communication on various social networking sites is an off shoot of the internet revolution. Though these sites have numerous advantages in terms of connectivity and sharing information, and are increasingly becoming a part of everyday life of people; they are being misused by anti-social elements, terrorist organizations, governments, various institutions and the public at large. Twitter, instagram, snap chat, blogs, whatsapp, virtual worlds and specific social networking sites like Facebook are an inseparable part of our lives in the modern world.

One of the biggest disadvantages is loss of privacy by individuals. Social networking sites ask for a great deal of personal information, and it is possible for people in all parts of the world to see that information. There are privacy settings for these sites, but many people are either unaware of them, or are careless about guarding their personal information. Besides, the information creates a "digital footprint" that cannot be easily erased. Many share inappropriate content and pictures on which can be misused by unscrupulous elements and cause irreparable damage to reputations.

Cyber bullying has become a common phenomenon on social networks. All most all teenagers admit to being a target of such bullying at least once in their lives. People are abused, reviled and mercilessly teased. Being malicious, unkind and cruel is fun for some people. Others use the medium to send an intimidating message, start a nasty rumor, or upload embarrassing photos. It's possible to be completely anonymous as well, so there is less chance of getting caught. Such bullying causes lasting psychological damage to the victims. Many have been known to have taken the extreme step of committing suicide.

Another problem that has been highlighted by psychiatrists is 'internet addiction disorder'. Many people literally live out their lives on social media. Every event and happening has to be shared on Facebook. Their lives revolve around the number of likes and comments they get on their posts. Unfortunately, many of these comments are insincere and fake, thus giving the individual incorrect perception of himself / herself. Moreover, this addiction consumes a lot of time which would be otherwise productively used for the benefit of the body and mind.

Contrarily, interacting on internet is also known to have caused a loss of social skills. Many people feel comfortable chatting with a person online than in engaging in a face to face verbal conversation.

These new virus particles go on to infect other cells. When our body is being affected by a virus our immune system kicks into action to stop or slow it down. At the end of 2019, the world came across a new type of virus called the Coronavirus (COVID-19). We have known about and studied coronaviruses for decades, but this (COVID-19) was a new strain to humans. The virus itself causes symptoms remarkably similar to a flu or common cold. While most people that contract the disease will just have basic symptoms that they should recover from in about two weeks, COVID-19 is much more serious than the common cold or flu. Generic English - I

Duration:2 Hours   Max Marks:60

UNIT I

I. (A) Skim the following paragraph and answer the questions that follow: 3×1= 3

Too many parents these days can't say no. As a result, they find themselves raising 'children' who respond greedily to the advertisements aimed right at them. Even getting what they want doesn't satisfy some kids; they only want more. Now, a growing number of psychologists, educators and parents think it's time to stop the madness and start teaching kids about what's really important: values like hard work, contentment, honesty and compassion. The struggle to set limits has never been tougher and the stakes have never been higher. One recent study of adults who were overindulged as children, paints a discouraging picture of their future: when given too much too soon, they grow up to be adults who have difficulty coping with life's disappointments. They also have a distorted sense of entitlement that gets in the way of success in the workplace and in relationships.

Psychologists say that parents who overindulge their kids, set them up to be more vulnerable to future anxiety and depression. Today's parents, themselves raised on values of thrift and self sacrifice, grew up in a culture where "no" was a household word. Today's kids want much more, partly because there is so much more to want. The oldest members of this generation were born in the late 1980s, just as PCs and video games were making their assault on the family room. They think of MP3 players and flat screen TV as essential utilities, and they have developed strategies to get them. One survey of teenagers found that when they crave for something new, most expect to ask nine times before their parents give in. By every measure, parents are shelling out record amounts. In the heat of this buying blitz, even parents who desperately need to say no find themselves reaching for their credit cards.Today's parents aren't equipped to deal with the problem. Many of them, raised in the 1960s and '70s, swore they'd act differently from their parents and have closer relationships with their own children. Many even wear the same designer clothes as their kids and listen to the same music. And they work more hours; at the end of a long week, it's tempting to buy peace with 'yes' and not mar precious family time with conflict. Anxiety about the future is another factor. How do well intentioned parents say no to all the sports gear and arts and language lessons they believe will help their kids thrive in an increasingly competitive world? Experts in the field of Psychology agree : too much love won't spoil a child. Too few limits will.

What parents need to find is a balance between the advantages of an affluent society and the critical life lessons that come from waiting, saving and working hard to achieve goals. That search for balance has to start early. Children need limits on their behaviour because they feel better and more secure when they live within a secured structure. Older children learn self control by watching how others, especially parents act. Learning how to overcome challenges is essential to becoming a successful adult.

1. What are the results of giving the children too much too soon?

2. What do experts in the field of psychology agree upon when it comes to overindulging in ones children?

3. How do older children learn self-control?

(B) Scan the following paragraph and answer the questions that follow: 2×1= 2

Have you ever heard of the word spuddle? It's the verb from the 17th century that means to work ineffectively, to be extremely busy whilst achieving absolutely nothing. Parkinson's law is an observation that states that "Work expands to fill the period of time available for its completion." In other words, people adjust their pace to the workload and the amount of time they have to finish it.

This law is named after Cyril Northcote Parkinson, the famous British historian and author. He wrote the definition above as an opening line to his article for The Economist in 1955. He later wrote a book about the concept, named Parkinson's Law:The Pursuit of Progress. Parkinson's law has since been proven with several studies. There's also the Parkinson's Law of Triviality, which states that people within organizations often give undue time and attention to trivial matters. As Parkinson said, "The time spent on any item of the agenda will be in inverse proportion to the sum [of money] involved."

(a) What does Parkinson's law suggest?

I. (A) Skim the following paragraph and answer the questions that follow: 3×1= 3

Can you imagine a college without walls, professors or classrooms? Educator Bunker Roy can. More than 40 years ago, Roy, now 69, founded the Barefoot College in Tilonia, Rajasthan. His school admits rural women, often grandmothers and teaches them the basics of solar engineering and freshwater technology. His efforts have yielded enormous benefits. When the women return to their homes, they are trained enough to provide their communities, some of the world's most lonely places, with electricity and clean water. They also gain something important: a newfound self-confidence. The Barefoot model has already been used to empower women throughout Asia, Africa, and Latin America. The former President of USA, Bill Clinton presented Roy with a Clinton Global Citizen Award, which honours leaders who are solving the world's problems in effective ways.

If you go all over the world, to very remote villages, you will often find only very old people and very young people. The men have already left. So two ideas were put into practice in order to make the Barefoot Model work. First it was declared that men are untrainable, restless, always ready to move, ambitious, and they all want a certificate to show for their efforts. And the moment you give one of them a certificate, he leaves the village looking for a job in the city. That is how the simple, practical solution of training grandmothers came up. They are sympathetic, tolerant, willing to learn, and patient. All the qualities you need are there. And the second idea was not to give out certificates. Because the moment a certificate is given, a woman, like a man, will see it as a passport for leaving rural areas and going to urban areas to find a job.

Barefoot College follows the lifestyle of Mahatma Gandhi: Students eat, sleep, and work on the floor. They can work for 20 years or they can go home the next day. As of today, 604 women solar engineers from 1083 villages in 63 countries have been trained. The engineers have given solar power to 45,000 houses. These were done by women who had never left their homes before. Bunker Roy dreams of providing the world's 47 least developed countries with Barefoot College trained grandmothers and solar electrify more than 1,00,000 houses.

(b) How did the former President of USA recognise Bunker Roy?

Today's woman is a highly self-directed person, alive to the sense of her dignity and the importance of her functions in the private domestic domain and the public domain of the world of work. Women are rational in approach, careful in handling situations and want to do things as best as possible. The Fourth World Conference of Women held in Beijing in September 1995 had emphasized that no enduring solution of society's most threatening social, economic and political problems could be found without the participation and empowerment of the women. SECTION A: RECEPTIVE SKILLS AND PRODUCTIVE SKILLS

I. Read the following passage and answer the following questions: 5×1= 5

When George Viccars, a tailor's assistant, set a parcel of cloth near a fire to dry, he never could have known it would unleash a disease that would kill hundreds of people. Like the surrounding villages, Eyam, England—a farming settlement of roughly 800—was vulnerable when the bubonic plague, or Black Death, arrived on its doorstep from London in August 1655. But unlike the other villages, Eyam's actions during the 14-month outbreak became historically and medically important in the fight against communicable diseases for hundreds of years to come.

As the frequent pandemics that swept through Europe since the 14th century can attest, bubonic plague was highly transmissible and nearly always fatal—and like pandemics today, it was spread via trade routes. In the 17th century, no one knew what caused plague; ideas about its origins included a punishment sent by God, or miasma (bad air). People had many ideas about saving themselves from the Black Death, including prayer and repentance of sins, smoking tobacco, or clearing piles of rubbish. The true cause of bubonic plague, however, was bacteria spread by fleas —and unbeknownst to Viccars, the damp cloth he dried near the fire was infested with them.

In the spring of 1666, William Mompesson, Eyam's newly appointed vicar, united with the parish's former vicar, Thomas Stanley, to set in motion a plan that would prevent the plague's spread to surrounding villages. They convinced the villagers to set up a cordon sanitaire—a quarantine zone—and asked them to stay within its boundaries. Signs posted at the borders warned outsiders to stay away.

Mompesson's plan also included holding church services outside—today's social distancing—as he understood there was less chance of transmission in open spaces. People have suggested avoiding person-to-person contact to fight the Black Death since the 14th century, though we now know pneumonic, not bubonic, plague is more likely to spread via respiratory droplets.

A total of 260 people perished of plague within Eyam. The last died on November 1, 1666, a little more than a year after the disease first hit the village. When the plague was over, Mompesson's final act was to encourage villagers to burn their clothing, furniture, and bedding and fumigate their houses to eliminate any potential remaining threat.

While Eyam paid a very high price, the village's sacrifice likely saved thousands of lives across the north of England. According to The Washington Post, the plague did not spread beyond Eyam's borders.
